Having no wild coun-try or powerful friends to shelter kim, it is evident that his only change of safety lay in his remaining in Dublin; but be ing personally so well known, we cannot conceive how he could have managed to conceal himself there without taking the most ordinary steps for his own preservation. The city is comparatively small; a very great proportion, if n lute majority, of its inhabitants are strongly opposed to his views, the £2,000 offered for his apprehension was enough to shake the finelity of many who must have been cognizant of his whereabouts; Steamship Company, and the Atlantic and with such circumstances to aid their and Mississippi Company were torn down efforts, we are at a loss to conjecture how a numerous and intelligent police could have failed to track him to his place of concealment. If it be true, as asserted, that he came to Holyhead in the ders from the council, as the inclosures mail packet, the very daring of such a step may have facilitated its success, for the quay at Kingstown -crowded as it always is on the arrival or departure of a steamer-would be the last place in which those seeking him would deem it likely to meet him, and a Government boat offered the lenst probable means of conveyance he could have chosen for his Although we should be sorry to impute disloyalty to a body of men so highly spoken of in Parliament by those who ought to be best qualified to form a correct opinion of their feelings and conduct, still it is impossible to shut our eyes to the fact that either they must be stupid to a degree, or corrupted, for otherwise Stephens would never have ventured to expose himself, as he must necessarily have done, to the observation of many of their number when passing to the packet; nor could he have evaded their pursuit if conducted with vigor and good faith during the months that have elapsed since his first escape, even though the whole population of Dublin were in league to protect him. And who, we ask, may be blamed if disloyalty is universal among the lower classes of the versal among the lower classes of the Irish people, and has even penetrated the barracks of the Irish police and the ranks of our army? Who but the Whig government, who having been kept au courant by their spies with the march of events in Ireland and America, hesitated from some unintelligible motives to strike in the one country or to remon. strike in the one country, or to remon-strate in the other, until the poison of treason was effectually spread among the peasantry, and had even tainted the paid and sworn defenders of the State.

The Small-pox-An Antidote and Cure-Dr. Cosmo G. Logie, Surgeon Major of Royal Horse Guards, in a letter to the London Ecening Mail, dated May 25th, 1863, furnishes the following antidote and care for small-pox-a disease which prevails to a greater or less extent throughout the South as an epidemic.

American plant called the saracenia purpurea, or pitcher plant, in the treat-ment of small-pox among the Indians, my colleague (Mr. Agnis) and myself have given this remedy, which has been imported into this country by Dr. Miles, a fair trial, and I am happy to say the eleven cases in our hands have recovered under its peculiar influence This remedy I consider a boon to the public, for this reason: It is so easily managed—any person can make a de-coction or infusion of this root like tea. An ounce of the root is sliced, and inIndia rubber and gutta percha applications, or of opening the pustules. In my opinion, all anticipations of disfigurement from pitting may now be calmed, if this medicine is given from the commencement of the disease.

-How to Accomplish It. From the New York News.] What, then, is to be done? Before leaving this subject, I may here caution the public that the useful part of the plant is in its root, as recommended by Dr. Miles. With the usual kindness of Dr. Gibson, the Director General, I have been amply supplied with it for the use of my regiment. So much am I impressed with the efficiency of it in small-pox over the old mode of treatment, that I hope to hear of it in every country I hope to hear of it in every country gentleman's medicine chest, and before ong, that we shall see no more faces as described by Dickens, like the interior surface of sliced muffins.

The success of their treachery and usurpation will make them still more arrogant and reckless, and will give their ambition wings to soar toward a confirmed absolutism. They must be met now, in the hour of their victory, met now, in the hour of their victory, by measures prompt and decisive, that will settle the issue and leave the field permanently in the possession of one or the other party. There must be a moral trial of strength between right and wrong, between usurpation and legitimate authority, between faction and the Executive supported by the people. The tive, supported by the people. The President, in his present position, is a mere puppet. Eleven States and their population, silenced and outlawed by Radical dictatorship, have been kept out of the arena. Their welfare, their safety, their very political life depend upon the issue in the settlement of which they are denied all voice and participation. They have the right to representation in the National Legislature. It is the duty of the President to protect them in the en-joyment of that right. It is a very gratifying fact that little or no falling off in the foreign trade of this port is noticeable so far, notwithstanding it is so late in the season. The Customseven foreign vessels were reported on Saturday last, and the gold receipts of the day for custom dues amounted to $43,000 dollars. This is proof that a large business is doing; and that our merchants expect it to continue is also proven by the fact that a very large number of invoices have been quite recently received from the United States Consuls in Liverpool, Havre, Bordeaux, and other Orleans several days prior to the arrival of the goods, and the ones now in hand show that a large amount of miscellane ous merchandise is on the way to this

Some time ago, seeing a paper written by Assistant Surgeon Miles, of the Royal Artillery, on the efficiency of the North Another evidence of the flourishing fused in a quart of water, and allowed to simmer down to a pint, and given in two tablespoonful doses every four hours, while the patient is well nourished with merchants - Time
